It's a copy/paste management tool which comes with 10 different preset lists to be filled in. Just type the required strings in the slots, and then fill in the box. As such, you're not even limited to a particular set of words, but can have them up to 10 lines. It even gives you the possibility to make the entries hidden, in case you'd rather not share them with anyone else. There are various options available for file saving, and you can also opt to save them to the clipboard.

Q: How to enable Java8 in Jenkins build pipeline? I have created a build pipeline in Jenkins where I am compiling an application that needs to be compiled with java8. My application has no dependencies that are relevant to java8 and I do not have any Java8 JDK installed. When I execute the stage of the build pipeline that compiles my application with java8 the build fails with a message: Could not find or load main class org.springframework.boot.loader.tools.Main Is there a way to enable the JDK that is needed to execute java8 or is there another solution to my problem? A: Well, this isn't the most elegant solution, but it might help. Create an empty shell script file under /var/lib/jenkins/workspace/stage-name/build-stage/target/libexec and name it the same thing you have in your environment settings for the JDK. Something like: java-7-1.8.x.x Create a symlink to that script file in your Jenkins environment: ln -s /var/lib/jenkins/workspace/stage-name/build-stage/target/libexec java-7-1.8.x.x In your Jenkins environment configuration, you can now point to that script as the java executable. java-7-1.8.x.x You can then execute your stage.

The application has the same name as a very well known VBA macro template, but that doesn't mean it's a clone. In fact, you can find many ways to utilize this tool, and there's a slight difference in functionality. The latter can insert text, while the former can copy and paste it into any field. Our opinion: CopyDream is a lightweight and useful tool, though it lacks the flexibility to be used as a template for any other application. An awesome tool which can be used to fill in templates which can be used for any application. When you copy this code into VBA and press tab you will see the completed subroutine. Press tab again and the sub will be completed. You can save the subroutine to your template library and use it for any application. I also think this is a great tool because it will allow you to not be lazy and do all the work yourself and save a lot of time.
